Accessory Buildings

Addition Requires Permit

The city has issued a reminder that a building permit is required for any building, structure or addition larger than 50 square feet.

Applicants should bring to code enforcement a drawing showing the existing buildings, the proposed building, the size and the distance to property lines.

Ralph Shick, chief building official, said the permit fee for improvements up to $5,000 valuation is $5. He stressed that any accessory building including greenhouses, utility storage buildings, garages, etc. on a residential lot cannot be used commercially. They are for hobbies and storage of household goods and related items.

Accessory buildings are not allowed in the front yard, he noted. In the rear yard, buildings less than 15 feet from the main residential building must maintain a 10-foot rear yard.

Buildings located more than 15 feet from the main building may be located up to the rear property line provided a fence at least as high as the accessory building creates a visual screen and an alley or easement separates the building from the property to the rear.

Such buildings must be set back 15 feet from the site street property line on a corner lot. Shick said this normally amounts to 26.5 feet from the curb.

On an interior lot, the side yard for a utility building must be 10 percent of the width of the entire lot. However, if the building is more than 15 feet from the main building, a side yard of only three feet is required.

Shick invites any question about how these requirements apply to individual pieces of property. For more information, contact code enforcement at 424-3556. The office at 1106 16th St. is open between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Highway Plans Include Plano

Several highway projects essential to Plano's transportation future have been included in the state's plan to guide highway reconstruction, rehabilitation and construction for the next 20 years.

The major thoroughfare which was originally dubbed Loop 9 has been included in the first five years of the plan.

SH 190 and other projects are approved for right-of-way acquisition and construction. Earlier this week, the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission authorized an additional $12.8 million for acquisition of right-of-way.

Thus far, the project has been awarded $19.1 million including $0.3 million for relocation purposes. The newly designated roadway will be built between IH 35E and SH 78, according to the plan.

North Central Expressway improvements are also included in the schedule. US 75 between I 345 in Dallas and FM 544 in Plano is listed as part of the second five-year phase.

Cleared by the commission for advance planning, projects in the second phase require additional action before they are cleared for construction or acquisition of right-of-way.

These projects will be the subject of route studies, public hearings and environmental reviews.

The plan visualizes US 75 as a 10 lane freeway in Dallas County and an eight lane freeway in Collin County. The department estimated costs for the first portion of development at $43.3 million with an additional $16.7 million in right-of-way acquisition.

During the last 10 years of the plan, the department has estimated that $80 million will be needed to complete the project.

The Park Boulevard Overpass is also included in the plan's second stage. The state's cost is estimated at $1.2 million with the city providing all necessary right-of-way.

Two other Collin County projects included in phase two are SH 78 from 1.4 miles north of Blue Ridge to the Fannin County line and US 380 from the Denton County line to SH 289 (Preston Road).

Near the top of the construction list is a project to construct a two lane rural facility on a new location for SH 78 from 1.0 mile south of Blue Ridge to 1.4 miles north of Blue Ridge.

This construction is the continuation of two projects on SH 78 currently under contract. Work is underway from 1.8 miles north of the L&A Railroad in Farmersville to 1.0 mile south of Blue Ridge.

Improvements to US 380 are also included in the first phase of the plan. Anticipated projects have limits from US 75 to 0.2 mile east of SP Railroad, from 0.2 mile east of SP Railroad to Princeton and from SH 289 to US 75.

Projects in the final 10 years of the plan have no authorization or approval at this time. They were included in the plan only as work that appears to be needed to have a complete, connected statewide highway system within the next 20 years.

A department spokesman noted that by including these projects in the last half of the plan, their feasibility can be determined and priorities can be established and re-established as other projects move forward.

Collin County projects included in this classification are SH 78 from the Dallas County line to Wylie, SH 121 from the Denton County line to SH 289 and US 380 from Princeton to SH 78.

B.L. DeBerry, engineer-director of the department has warned that it is impossible to be able to forecast or foresee needs exactly over a period as long as 20 years.

"For this reason," he said, "this plan must be reviewed and evaluated on a regular basis during the period and certainly whenever any economic or other conditions alter transportation patterns in Texas."

"Any appreciable change in financing—either up or down—would create the necessity for revising the plan to fit changed conditions," he continued. "Projects—both those now included and others that might not be—would be reconsidered at each revision."

Farmers Optimistic President Will Act

By United Press International

Texas participants in the first nationwide farmers strike say they are optimistic the boycott's impact will win the strikers a meeting soon with President Carter and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

"We're very hopeful and confident that within the next two or three days we will be getting a reception from the president and the secretary of agriculture to just sit down and talk," said Gerald McCathern, a spokesman for American Agriculture, the group heading the strike. McCathern, a Hereford, Texas, farmer, has been designated Texas' representative should such a meeting take place.

"We have what we think are constructive ideas on farm policy for this nation," he said Sunday. We've had lawyers, educators and people like that are far removed from farming creating farm policy. And we think a commission of agriculture producers should be formulating policy."

Most of the Texas strike activity has taken place in the Panhandle.

Last week farmers on tractors paraded through Amarillo, Abilene,

Hereford and Lubbock and grocery warehouses and bakeries in the area closed temporarily in honor of the picket lines.

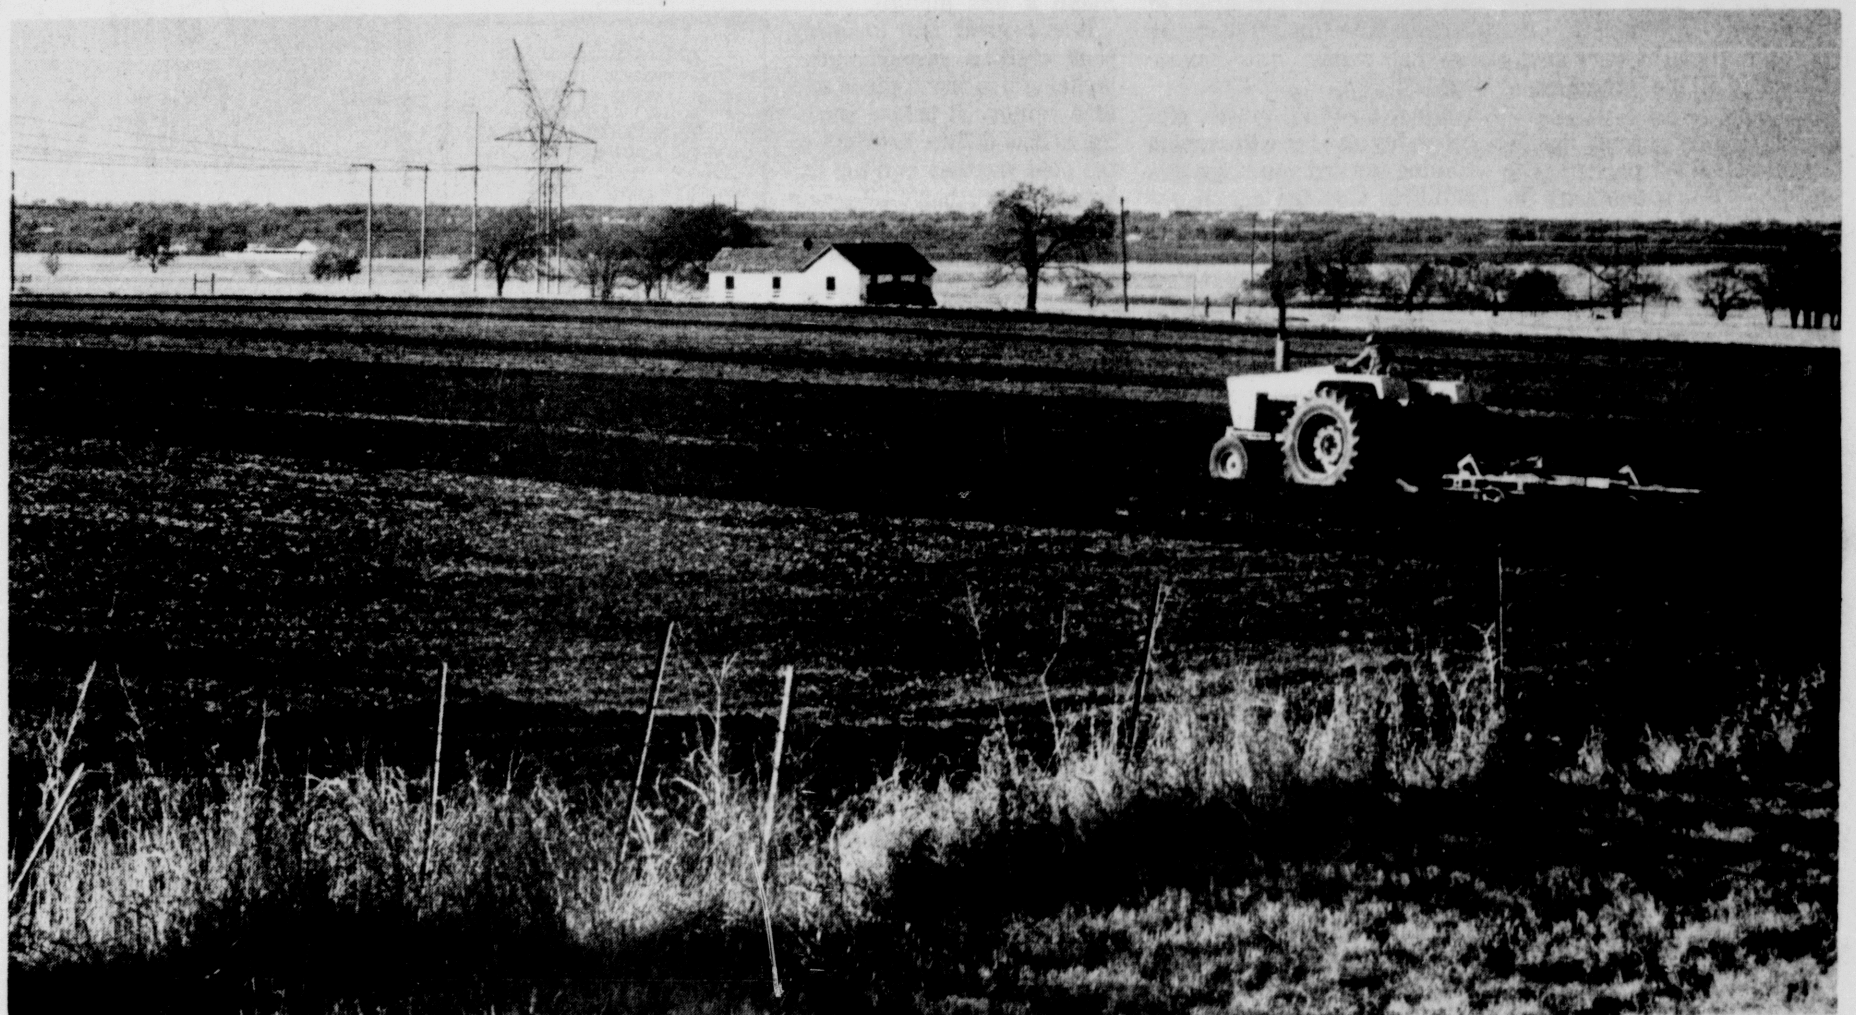

There also were scattered demonstrations in North Texas, the Austin area and South Texas.

"Everything's gone as planned and everything's been peaceful," said McCathern. "We've had a lot of cooperation from businesses. We're their friends and they're our friends."

"I expect more cooperation on down the line. It's getting to the point where we can call on certain days and ask bakeries not to deliver for 24 hours. We've got the support of the majority of them."

Farm leader Greg Rystead Sunday said American Agriculture representatives had asked Lubbock Mayor Roy Bass to declare Tuesday American Agriculture Day in the city.

In Lubbock Saturday an estimated 300 tractors rolled into a shopping mall parking lot to impress their problem on Christmas shoppers. Rystead said that demonstration was the end of "Phase 1" of the strike and the second phase hopefully would be spread to more farmers and consumers.

Few farmers are working in the fields these days—they are on strike for parity. Collin County farmers and ranchers claim they cannot make enough when they sell their crops to recover costs. To emphasize their problem, they have said they will not buy, sell or plant until they are given parity. Milo farmer Bill Donihoo says the local movement is coming along very well as more people attend each meeting. "We're doing everything we know to do," he added. Donihoo predicted that people will soon begin to feel the effect of the strike as supplies begin to gradually tighten. (Staff photo by Mike Newman).

'Bigger'an a Elephant', Say Experts

By CAROLYN A. LESH

MERRIAM, Kan. (UPI)—A panel of experts on Santa Claus will quickly put to rest any doubts about the existence of the world's most beloved fat man.

Several of the 2-, 3- and 4-year-olds at La Petite Learning Center in this Kansas City suburb are on such good terms with St. Nick they know his favorite foods, directions to his house, his hobbies and even his age and weight.

"He's a fatty," says tiny blonde-haired and blue-eyed Erica Jacoby, 3, who held out her arms to demonstrate Santa's girth. "He weighs 20 (sic) pounds and he's bigger 'an a elephant."

Denise Deatrick, a confessed cookie lover herself, says it's a safe bet to leave something sweet for Santa to munch on while he's distributing toys round the tree. But to really get on Santa's good side, Denise advises, it's best to put out his favorite food.

"Santa likes macaroni and cheese the best—not cookies," she says. "He likes bubble gum too and candy."

But some thought should go into Santa's treat, says chubby Buddy Dabelstein, because there are a few food items that really turn Santa off.

"He h-a-t-e-s dog food," says Buddy. "And he hates pickles and carrots."

When he's not busy with reindeer, toy-making or Mrs. Claus, Santa likes to play outside, ride his sleigh and of course, watch television. His favorite TV programs, the experts say, are Superman, Batman and Wonder Woman.

Some of the experts, however, had a scholarly disagreement on Santa's age and address.

"He's older 'an me," says 2½-year-old Denise. "He's 3."

"No he's not. He's this many," says Erica holding up 10 fingers. "He's old, old, old because his beard is all white."

But 4-year-old Buddy, who portrays Santa Claus in the nursery school's Christmas pageant, is firmly convinced that he is the same age as his professional counterpart.

A few of the Claus aficionados voiced the opinion that Santa lives "downtown in the store" or "out in the shopping center." But they were outshouted by the North Pole advocates.

"And I can even tell you where the North Pole is," says Erica. "It's across the street and then you go that way," she said pointing left, "and then you turn and you go a little farther and you're at Santa's house."

And then there are the select few who've actually seen Santa in act on. Heather is one of the lucky ones.

"I've seen him at my house," she confides. "I sneaked downstairs and he was giving me some presents. Nobody else saw him 'cuz it was late and everybody else was asleep. It was 8 o'clock."

But the presents only come to good girls and boys, the Santa devotees firmly agree. And Santa Claus can't be fooled.

"He has a magic mirror," says Heather. "He can see you whenever he wants. And he can see in the dark."

Buddy, who looks like he's had some experience in the field, has some practical advice on how to be good:

"Quit sticking out your tongues, calling people dummy and saying naughty words," he says. "You have to go to bed right when your mommy tells you and you even have to go to sleep."

Calendars to Benefit Texas Mental Health

The first calendar designed to promote conservation and mental health was marketed today, announced creator Roger Rasbach of Houston.

Rasbach, an international home designer, contends that provident living and mental health are linked in solving our greatest national crisis—the energy crisis.

“Waste poses the greatest threat to our freedom, our mental health, in the history of our nation”, he said.

To combat this waste Rasbach designed a conservation calendar, full of straightforward information on conserving energy.

The calendar goes beyond the concept of saving just physical energy. Rasbach wants families to create an American lifestyle which saves material and physical and emotional energies.

This is a principle on which he also based a book “The Provident Planner.”

The conservation calendar is filled with timely hints for families on health, mental health, saving energy, and growing your own food.

Convinced that the individual citizen must do his or her part in solving the nation's problems, Rasbach likes to quote from a letter from President Jimmy Carter:

“Unlike many other approaches to solving society's problems, energy conservation relies primarily on the action of individual citizens—upon your willingness to change some of the things you do, and some of the decisions you make in the marketplace.

“It is more than sacrifice, or simply doing without. Correcting current inefficiencies in your home, for example, and investing wisely in future purchases will not only save abundant amounts of energy but will save money for you,” said Carter.

“Solving the energy crisis must start by ‘prevention’ in our living patterns, molding our third century with an altered state of mental health,” said Rasbach.

Rasbach wants to help bring out this change through his calendar.

He hopes that families will use the calendar, and its ideas and activities, to bring about a change in their own living patterns, bringing them more happiness.

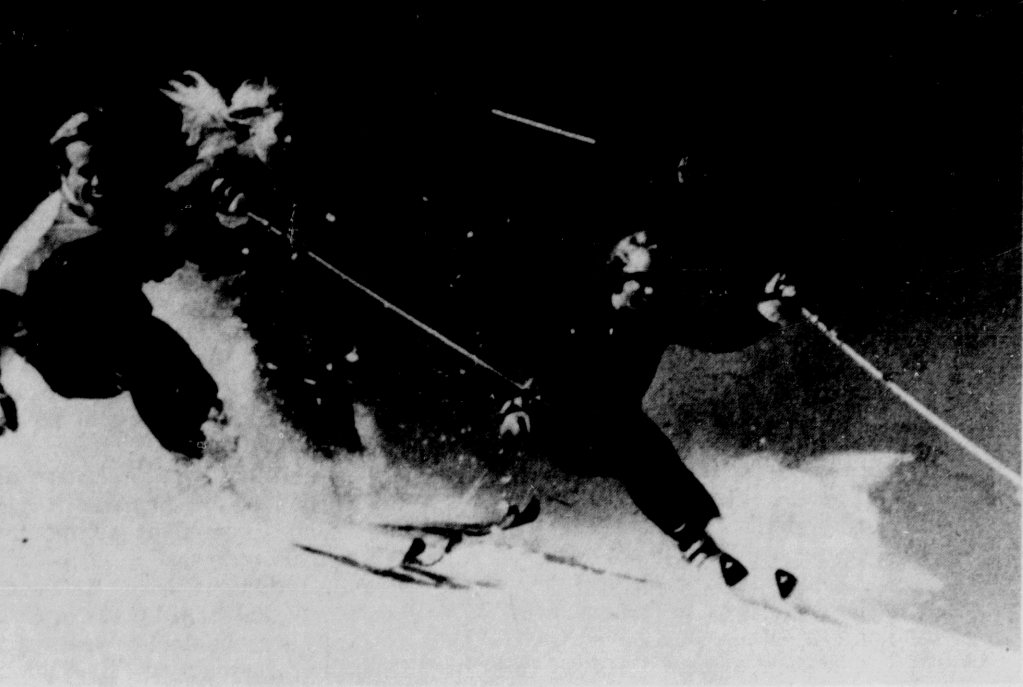

The calendar itself is a tool, containing a “family activities” checklist, a place to store warranties and a common-sense orientation to living.

Practicing what it preaches, the calendar is partially recyclable with the outside cover a reusable three-ring binder.

Rasbach coined the term “emergency” which stands for energy-emergency. His “Emergency” calendar can be obtained by sending $7.00, which includes tax and handling, to: “Emergency,” P.O. Box 276, Austin, Texas 78767. (Out-of-state price is $6.70 total.)

Proceeds from the calendar will benefit the Mental Health Association, a nationwide citizens group working to promote mental health and prevent mental illness while working for better mental health services.

Shooting Stars

By JERRY WINDLE
Copley News Service

Taking pictures in the snow can provide some very exciting picture possibilities, but care must be exercised not only in taking pictures, but also in protecting your equipment from the snow and cold.

Now is an excellent time for a brief review on the art of snow photography as well as learning some new ideas you might try out the next time you get into the white fluffy stuff.

The first thing we should remind ourselves of is trying to determine the correct exposure. Snow, like sand at the beach, casts as a giant reflector bouncing the sunlight back onto our subject and back into the camera lens.

This means you must keep a close eye on the automatic exposure meter in the camera. It can be very easily fooled by all the brightness of the snow.

You should consult the information sheet packed with the film. This is true with the new fast films especially. These little sheets offer suggested exposures for low light situations and also advise you on exposures for bright subjects like snow or sand. Remember this recommended setting so you can double-check your meter.

If you are making pictures of people in the snow, it is a good idea to walk up close to them and make the meter reading off their face, then use that reading. Otherwise your meter will read the snow and your subject will acquire a sudden dark tan.

Strong sidelighting can be very effective for snow pictures since it will emphasize the texture of the snow. Keep an eye open for long shadows across the fresh untouched snow.

When you get people in the snow the inevitable will happen ... the snowball fight. This can make for some very funny pictures, but watch out.

It won't be too long before the photographer will suddenly become the target of those snowballs flying through the air.

If you should suffer a direct hit, brush the snow off the camera, especially the lens, as soon as you can. You should be watching to make sure no snow gets on the lens since this will ruin your pictures.

As soon as you get into a warmer environment, the car or a room, take a soft towel to the camera and wipe the excess water from the camera. A little water shouldn't hurt the camera that much, but make sure you get as much wiped off as you can. Take some lens cleaning tissue to the lens when it has dried to remove any film left from the drying water and water spots.

When shooting action pictures, try and have the action coming toward you since this will help stop the action. Be careful though since this could be rather risky in snow where sleds don't always go where they are supposed to.

Skiers should have a little more control over their movements so you should feel a little more comfortable when photographing skiers. Plus they have a little more ham in them and like to pose for pictures.

Place yourself close enough to the ski trail so you can fill the viewfinder when the skier passes. At a snow resort, a good spot is the edge of the trail or near a turn.

If the day is overcast meaning a lower shutter speed, try “panning” or moving the camera with the skiers as they pass. This will blur out the background while the skier remains sharp.

You can give another kind of emphasis to your pictures by shooting up at the skiers as they come over a hill. They will be silhouetted against the sky and you will have an unusual action shot of the skier against the simplest possible background ... the sky.

Sunsets can be very dramatic in snow covered scenes, the yellowish light can turn the scene into a golden picture. If you have people in the scene in brightly colored cold weather jackets more color will be added.

Remember when using your camera in cold weather to let it become acclimated to sudden changes in temperatures such as going from warm indoors to cold outdoors and vice-versa.

Be aware of frost on the lens or on internal elements. This happens during a sudden temperature change and can mean a lost picture.

It is a good idea to carry your camera beneath your jacket or in a warm place and then remove it before shooting. Allow it time to adapt to the cold weather and for the lens to clear, then make your pictures.

Prof Addresses UTD 'Key Issues' Series Continues

“The future of international business belongs either to the international purveyors of technology, skills, access to international information and marketing systems or to the transnational corporation.”

Dr. Richard D. Robinson, MIT professor of management, made this statement in the “Key Issues Lecture Series” at the University of Texas at Dallas.

The series, made possible by a grant from International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, is on “Private Enterprise & the New Global Economic Challenge”.

Dr. Robinson, who spoke about “Transfers of Technology from Rich to Poor Nations”, said his analysis “highlights the need for flexible corporate policies to conform to perceived host country needs.

“It is not up to us to judge whether the perceptions are good, bad, or indifferent except that if one perceives that a policy is at odds with a society's own priorities, one had better hedge in anticipation of a change,” Robinson continued.

“If forced to make the choice of the preeminent form of international business enterprise 10 years out, I would suggest that the general trading company model most nearly fits the needs of many of the resource-rich, technology poor countries,” he added.

“What it sells is debt capital, entrepreneurial high-risk capital (which is withdrawn in favor of local ownership as quickly as possible), high level skills, technology, access to international information services, and access to an international marketing system.”

Dr. Robinson was the second of six speakers in the “Key Issues Lecture Series.”

The series continues on Jan. 17 with Irving Kristol, senior fellow of the American Enterprise Institute and a member of the board of contributors of the Wall Street Journal. Kristol will discuss “Capitalism vs. Anticapitalism: The Moral and Political Issues.”

Frog crisis hits U.S.

The U.S. frog population may have been cut by half in the last decade, and the United States is in the middle of a frog crisis, asserts Dr. Dianne B. Seale of Penn State University.

Frogs are among man's safest and best pesticides, eating up to 10,000 insects in three months. And at least 16 per cent of this number may be the devastating cutworm.

Citizens Checked At Clinic

Over 80 citizens of Plano took advantage of the American Heart Association's hypertension screening clinic held recently at the First National Bank of Plano.

The clinic, a community service of the Collin County Division of the American Heart Association, was sponsored to screen local citizens for hypertension, more commonly referred to as high blood pressure.

"This is shocking," he said, "but it's not nearly as shocking as another estimate which says that half of these people don't even know that they are hypertensive.

Steve Williams, president of the Collin County division, explained that an estimated 23 million Americans have high blood pressure.

Santa and Friends

Members of the Vines High School Future Homemakers of America hosted a Christmas Party for the children from the Douglas Co-op. After singing Christmas carols, Santa Claus paid a visit to the children. Santa asked the children what they wanted for Christmas and then he gave each child a gift. The children were then treated to homemade cookies and punch. (Staff photos by Richard LaGow).

The Record

By Steve Soltis and Jeff Brown

I felt the 10 best albums of 1977 are as follows:

- (1) "Going For The One" (Yes) Wakeman is return to Yes suddenly produces the best LP of '77.
- (2) "Works Vol. I" (ELP) Emerson, Lake & Palmer unites after a separation of nearly three years and combines their separate talents on this the first of two "Works" albums.
- (3) "Animals" (Pink Floyd) An excellent album. What more can be expected from the Floyd?
- (4) "American Star's N Bars" (Neil Young) Listening to this L.P. makes me want to see Young back with CSN.
- (5) "CSN" (Crosby Stills, and Nash) Almost as good as their concert.
- (6) "Love You Live" (The Rolling Stones) This really makes me antsy for their US Spring-Summer tour.
- (7) "Book Of Dreams" (Steve Miller) A great followup to "Fly Like An Eagle"
- (8) "Finale" (Loggins & Messina) This live L.P. proves L&M were the rulers of mellow. It's too bad the reign couldn't have lasted longer.
- (9) "Rumours" (Fleetwood Mac) Slightly overrated, but nevertheless, a good album.
- (10) "Terrapin Station" (Greatfull Dead) "Netherlands" (Dan Fogelburg) Two Good L.P.'s that tied for number 10 that really didn't receive alot of attention.

My favorite concerts of 1977 are as follows:

1. Emerson, Lake and Palmer- by far the best performance I've witnessed this year. ELP are planning another U.S. tour some time this spring, and I doubt seriously if they'll bypass Dallas after the results of their October appearance.
2. Eagles - this band performed with so much confidence that it was hard for me to spot a single flaw. Walsh and Fender (on guitars) were excellent, and singer-drummer Henley proved he was one of the best.
3. Crosby, Stills, & Nash - I have never seen an audience more rapped up in music than at this concert. After the second encore the houdelights went on a the P.A. system fired up, but few left their seats. CSN was forced to come back out and play one more tune. This has to be one of the greatest compliments a band can receive.
4. Steve Miller - the hometown boy returned in high fashion, leaving 14,000 people at Tarrant County Convention Center truly satisfied.
5. Dan Fogelburg - After a rather shaky start, Fogelburg came back and gave one of the finest concerts of the summer. He proved, however, that he needed Fool's Gold on stage to keep the show alive.

Volunteers Guide Convoys

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Jacques Laurent says there's nothing like sailing a 13-ton truck through the sands and rock of an African desert.

He's done it 10, maybe 12 times in the past eight years, always with his buddies and always with a purpose beyond his sheer lust to go.

Laurent, 45, and his friends have formed a convoy corps that makes overland hauls to Africa, at no charge, whenever there's a need.

Guy Waeghenaere, 32, a Belgian army paratrooper, has been in most of Laurent's convoys since the two met on the way to Dakar, Senegal, in 1969.

"The better the project, the more time I can get off from the Ministry of Defense," Waeghenaere said, explaining how he manages to pull three and four month leaves almost every year.

For Laurent, it's easy. As a self-employed heating repairman in Liege, Belgium, he works when he wants.

"My wife, she says nothing," he said. "I have this passion to travel and she understands."

It may have started as a passion to travel but something more motivates them now.

Back in 1969 when Laurent was doing "nothing but working," the head of a Liege auto club asked him to guide some 250 young people on an overland trip to Dakar. Waeghenaere was handling logistics.

Five 13-ton trucks, an ambulance, a Land-Rover and 26 cars spent two months on the open road and 10 days in Dakar and Laurent was hooked.

Waeghenaere got started two years earlier when he and 34 other Belgian soldiers answered an officer's plea for volunteers to cart 27 tons of grain and other supplies to the village of Ounianga Kebir, south of the Tibesti Mountains in Chad.

The officer had stopped at the village on an east-to-west Africa trip a few years earlier. He promised the people he'd be back with help.

Laurent took a group of students in two Land-Rovers on a three month trip through Mali, Senegal, Niger, Upper Volta and Nigeria in 1970 and came back to Belgium to leave a month later with a some doctors and social scientists for a study of the Toubbous tribe in Niger.

"Since then it's been about one a year for us," Waeghenaere said.

Three years later their best friend, a pilot, was killed in a crash over mountains in northern Iraq. Laurent, Waeghenaere and five other paratroopers went to search for the body. They brought it back to Belgium for burial.

"He was our leader, our friend. What could we do?" Waeghenaere said.

"That was when the traveling became important for us. That was when we formed our own organization."

It was 1973 and drought parched most of West Africa. The men decided they needed to help.

They made speeches and gave slide shows in Belgium and Luxembourg to raise money and bought four World War II-vintage, four-ton U.S. Army trucks for $1,000 apiece.

"We loaded more than six tons on each truck," Waeghenaere said. "The Common Market gave us five tons of sugar and five tons of milk and we worked constantly for a month to get ready to go.

In July they left for Niger. "It took us a month to get there and we traveled two months in the country, distributing the goods.

"God it was hot. I lost 22 pounds and so did my friend. Ten men left on the trip with us and only four stayed till the end."

bedded down in the trucks.

The latest trip was a spring convoy to deliver three trucks for a non-governmental organization project in Bayad al Arab, a village south of Cairo across the Nile from Beni Suef.

They were supposed to go on to deliver five more trucks to a Belgian couple's village development project in Ethiopia but Sudan would not assure them safe passage so they canceled that.

"We always do the trips for a humanitarian reason," Waeghenaere said. "And we always give directly to the people.

"It's a great feeling of freedom. It is to do something concrete, something interesting..."

High School Students Join All-Region Band

Fourteen Plano high school students have been selected to perform with two All-Region bands. The auditions took place recently at North Garland High School in Garland. Plano Senior High students Janet Turner, Tricia Newton and Jim Brake were named to perform with the All-Region Concert Band. Selected for the All-Region Symphonic Band were PSHS students Jan Murphy, Gay Sharp, Mikey Owens, Randy Myzer.

Vines student David Lovrien also qualified for the All-Region Symphonic Band. Murphy, Sharp, Owens, Myzer, Hayes, Wellbeloved, Rude and Lovrien will advance to the All-Area tryouts on Jan. 21 in Arlington where they will be competing with students from three other regions for the opportunity to advance to the All-State bands.

Kimple and Parsons have already been selected as members of the Texas All-State Orchestra.

In Mexican Jail

Prisoner Finds Love

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — How does an American prisoner find happiness in a Mexican jail? She falls in love.

Ann Kathryn White, 27, of Fairfield told her love story Wednesday in a telephone interview from San Diego where prisoners in an exchange program between the United States and Mexico are being processed.

She is one of three Connecticut residents released this week in the prisoner switch. She said she was serving the 16th month of a five-year sentence on trumped-up charges when she met her fiance, a Mexican from Colima. He was spending his fourth year in prison for intent to commit robbery. She said she was allowed to see him twice a week for 24-hour visits.

"And that was how I found happiness in a Mexican prison," she told the Hartford Tribune.

Museums clean old art

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — Several years ago my husband painted a picture for me in oil paint and it is soiled as it was never placed behind glass in a frame. Can you tell me if this can be cleaned and, if so, how? — MARY K.

DEAR MARY K. — Indeed an oil painting can be cleaned and often the change is astounding but it is not a job to be done at home. Take your painting to a professional for cleaning. Your local art museum will doubtless give you the name of a trustworthy person in your vicinity. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I have two Pet Peeves. The first is with the fliers that come advertising sales and give no dates for starting and closing. The other concerns packaged meat that has all the excess fat and skin tucked underneath the meat so the buyer cannot see it.

When the elastic on my pantyhose is too tight I cut through the elastic by the seam and it does not run and is much more comfortable. Also this helps mark the front and back. — MATILDA.

DEAR POLLY — As the holidays approach I make a calendar for the small impatient children that they can comprehend. For Christmas I make a Santa face with a paper chain that has each day numbered on a link in the chain. Each day the children remove the link marked with that day and they can count the remaining links and know how many more days until Christmas. When receiving gifts of small appliances such as watches, toasters and even toys, immediately take the address off the box or warranty card and put it in your address book. When repairs or parts are needed the address is close at hand. — LAURELLE.

DEAR POLLY — All year long I keep a special notebook with WISH BOOK printed on the outside. Inside there is a page for each member of the family with the name at the top. Anytime any of us thinks of anything we would like to have (regardless of use, price, etc.) we list the item with price, color, size and where it can be bought under the right name. If at some time we receive one of the things as a gift or decide we no longer want it the item is crossed out. This book is most useful for reference when buying birthday, Christmas or any other gifts. It is so much nicer to give something one knows is really wanted. — MRS. F.M.

DEAR POLLY — My husband's lunch box always stays neat, since I use those small oblong boxes that jewelry comes in for organizers. I put his gum, toothpicks, acid tablets, salt, pepper, sugar, etc., in them. — MRS. B.M.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Dallas Cowboys Ride Broncos, 14-6

Pressure from the Dallas Cowboy's defense forced this bad pitchout by Denver Bronco's reserve quarterback Craig Penrose. Denver starter Craig Morton played only briefly before leaving the helm with a slight injury. The Cowboys beat Denver 14-6 and the two teams finished the regular season tied for the best record in the National Football League at 12-2. Both teams enter the playoffs next weekend. Dallas against Chicago and Denver against Pittsburgh. (Staff Photo by Richard LaGow.)

Preview Becomes Ho-Hum Affair

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys and Denver Broncos got together for a dress rehearsal Sunday and some members of the chorus forgot their lines.

But they all have another week to learn them before the critics arrive for the opening performance of what is known around the National Football League as "the new season."

"If we were to play in the Super Bowl," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, "you would see a different game." "We feel we could play them better the next time," chimed in Denver Coach Red Miller. "And maybe they could play us better."

So the principals are on record.

If Dallas and Denver should happen to play in the Super Bowl next month, we are likely to see something other than what we saw Sunday — which was Dallas winning, 14-6, in a game that never threatened to turn into the fierce, intense, prideful battle for which some had hoped.

But the Broncos and Cowboys — who share the NFL's best record at 12-2 — both have a way to go before a rematch can be arranged.

To start with, the Cowboys must tangle with the emotionally high Chicago Bears in the NFC divisional playoffs at Texas Stadium Dec. 26.

And Denver has to take on the always meanaring Pittsburgh Steelers in the Broncos first playoff game in history next Saturday at Mile High Stadium.

So with those important assignments on the calendar, the Cowboys and Broncos can be forgiven for putting on a less than thrilling show Sunday.

The highlights, few as they were, included:

—Roger Staubach throwing for two touchdowns — 22 yards to Preston Pearson on the Cowboys' first possession and seven yards to Robert Newhouse early in the third quarter.

Staubach hit 15 of 20 for 160 yards and, although the final statistics are not yet in, probably finished the regular season as the No. 1 passer in the NFC.

—Tony Dorsett becoming the eighth rookie in NFL history to gain more than 1,000 yards, picking up 50 Sunday to run his season total to 1,007.

—Norris Weese, the third Denver quarterback, coming in to move the Broncos in the second half. But the surprise team in the NFL this season had to settle for field goals of 22 and 37 yards by Jim Turner. The lowlights, however, played a key role in the outcome:

—Denver quarterback Craig Morton, who had worked out sparingly during the week because of a bruised hip, was banged down hard on the Broncos third play and sat out the rest of the action. Morton said he planned to play only a few series anyway.

—Broncos return specialist Rick Upchurch was held in check, returning two punts for three yards.

—Dallas' Efren Herrera, the Pro Bowl place kicker, missed on attempts from 38, 45 and 28 yards. He thus missed a chance to become the NFL's leading scorer in 1977.

"We were ready to play at first," said Landry. "Then when Craig went out it took some of the luster off."

"We accomplished our objectives. We wanted Tony to get his 1,000 yards and it was important that our defense come back and play well (after giving up 35 points the previous games)."

Allen Frosh Wins, 44-18

Allen's freshman Eagles downed the Princeton JV Thursday night 44-18.

Benji Dean was the leading scorer for the Eagles with 14 points. He was followed by Alan Griffin and Terry Byrom both with six points.

Others in on the scoring were David McRoberts,

Vincent Turner, Reggie Gentry and Eddie Berg all with four points and Steven Kelly with two points.

Coach Steve Williams cited David McRoberts and Vincent Turner as having good games.

Patterson Paces Vikings

Gina Patterson poured in 32 points Thursday night as the Vines High School girls defeated North Garland 49-20.

After taking a 30-6 half-time lead the girls coasted to the victory.

Others in on the scoring were Debbie Howell with 12 points, Cindy Beville and Betsy Horne with two points and Evrin Moreland with one point.

Underdog Plano Becomes Top Dog

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — The role of underdog was appropriate all season for the Plano Wildcats. They came to understand it and use it to their advantage, especially Saturday.

Coach Tom Kimbrough's Wildcats used a marauding defense and an efficient offense to knock off Port Neches-Groves, 13-10, to take the Class AAAA state championship before 49,953 fans, the largest crowd to see a Texas high school football game.

The Indians, unbeaten and ranked No. 1 since mid-season, played right into the Wildcats' hands, coming heavily favored as had Dallas Highland Park and Odessa Permian the two weeks before.

Doing a little of everything for Plano was Stevie Haynes, somewhat of an underdog himself at 5-foot-8 and 145 pounds.

But Saturday Haynes, who defeated Permian the week before with the game's only score, a field goal, kicked field goals of 26 and 30 yards. He also did Plano's punting' punt returning and caught all three of Steve Ulmer's completions to set up a field goal.

"He's got a pretty big heart under those shoulder pads," said Kimbrough, making Haynes the only player he singled out.

The win made Plano the only team ever to win championships on Class AAAA, AAA and AA levels.

Port Neches-Groves, state champion in 1975, had given up only 19 points in its four previous playoffs games fell behind 10-0 on Haynes' first field goal and an 11-yard run by Jeff Turner.

The Indians came back on their next possession with a 72-yard, 15-play touchdown drive that lasted almost seven minutes. Quarterback David Fry pushed his way into the end zone from the one on third down.

From there each team kicked a field goal but the Plano defense clamped off any Port Neches-Groves' drives.

The Indians had their final chance with 1:12 left but the final rally was ended when Norris Smith sacked quarterback David Fry with 43 seconds remaining — the sixth time Plano had reached the quarterback—

"We didn't start our real pass rush until late in the second half," Kimbrough said. "We felt we needed to put more pressure on them."
